Dear Friends,

What a truly special state we live in. I have called Wyoming my home for almost my whole life. I have also called the Wyoming Community Foundation (WYCF) home for many years. I started as a grants administrator and reported for my first day of work to our offices on the top floor of the First Interstate Bank Building in downtown Laramie. While the views outside my office window have changed over the years, the generosity of WYCF donors has remained constant.

Because of you, we accepted more than 1,000 donations and made more than 1,000 grants across an entire spectrum of charitable areas, from the arts to job training and everything in between.

This year's annual report highlights the many causes you care about. As I look back with amazement at all you did in 2021, I am humbled to assume the role of President & CEO of the Wyoming Community Foundation. What inspires me most in this new role is what has always inspired me: the incredible people and organizations we work with every day.

You can read about the impact of that work in this report. You helped Wyoming communities and nonprofits thrive. Your generosity made it possible for Wyoming students to get to school safely. Because you care about Wyoming's working families, a childcare center expanded its services to parents and children. Gifts from people like you ensure that our nonprofits will continue to thrive for years to come.

Wyoming is not special by accident: it is because of you. I look forward to an exciting future with you as we work together to build a better Wyoming. Thank you for your continued support- we couldn't do this without you.

With warmest wishes,

A Drive for Success

y car was stuck at the movie theater for about a week until I could get it towed. That's when I reached out to Shoop," says Josh, a junior at Whiting High School in Laramie.

Josh didn't have the funds to get his car fixed. Whiting Principal Scott Shoop found a way to help Josh. To stay in school and get to work, students rely on safe transportation. It's one of the most important factors for these students to be successful.

"Not having a working car impacted his attendance at school and his ability to get to work," says Scott. "He's homeless, so he has to work in order to keep things going."

Because of your support, a grant from the Wyoming Community Foundation made it possible for Josh to get his car fixed. The grant helped other students at WHS in similar ways, like purchasing a new battery or getting small repairs

"It's also a safety issue," says Scott. "It's important to us that our students driving on these roads have some degree of safety, which is often hard if you're pinching pennies."

Thoughtful donors like you make a very big difference in the lives of students like Josh. He is working towards going to college and getting a business degree.

"I've been cooking for a while and worked at a restaurant downtown; it's cool to make people happy with food" says Josh. "I'm also into fashion and would like to open up a clothing store someday."

Scott appreciates the flexibility WYCF allows him with this grant. It's need-based so he works with students when they are in a tough spot.

"Through no fault of his own Josh has a lot to overcome to get to his goal," says Scott. "We're very proud of how he's going about that, how resilient he is, and what he's overcome so far."

Because of your support, a grant from the Wyoming Community Foundation made it possible for Josh to get his car fixed. The grant helped other students at WHS in similar ways, like purchasing a new battery or getting small repairs.

Grant $2,500 amount:

WHS Transportation Assistance Program: Assists students financially with repair, maintenance, and purchasing a vehicle to be a viable way to improve their quality of life and support these students in remaining active in participating in the social and academic opportunities.

The mission of Whiting High School is to optimize each student's ability and opportunity to live a quality life.

- Meet the needs of diverse students who do not thrive in a traditional academic setting.
- Provide a more holistic and trauma-responsive educational opportunity that meets students' social, emotional, and academic needs.
- 2 Graduate students who might not otherwise graduate.
- Focus on where the student is six months after leaving WHS, whatever the pathway the student chooses.

WYOMING AFTERSCHOOL ALLIANCE

yoming's youth are courageous and adaptable. They have great ideas and want to help their community. They want to bring their ideas to life and turn problems into solutions, and sometimes they just need a little help. Thanks to the Wyoming

Afterschool Alliance (WYAA) and their supporters, this is possible.

The Wyoming Young Entrepreneur Pitch Challenge is a program that provides youth with the opportunity to practice skills that build their confidence and critical thinking while empowering them to make a difference. The Pitch Challenge provides an opportunity for Wyoming kids to express themselves while working to make their communities and the whole state of Wyoming a better place.

"The Alliance is proud to provide this opportunity for young people to share their ideas," says WYAA director Michelle Sullivan. "Young people in Wyoming are looking toward the future and imagining solutions to problems they face every day."

Caydence, a student at Buffalo High School, knows that time management can be a challenge for her peers, and she wanted to help her classmates. The Pitch Challenge presented an opportunity to hone her message around her business, "Full of Purpose Planners."

(1 I really connect with being organized and having really good time management...)

"I really connect with being organized and having really good time management," says Caydence. "I wanted my business to be something for people where they could have an outlet to be organized or have better time management."

In pitching her planners, Caydence said "paper planners come with fewer distractions. They lead to greater productivity and promote informational recall which can lead to staying on top of lots of things. Paper is also an amazing sensory outlet that reduces stress and anxiety."

The Pitch Challenge provides modules, interactive videos and activities, and one-on-one coaching for students to create and craft their pitch. Last year, participating youth created a 45-90 second video. Each video is uploaded to an online platform provided by Impact307. Volunteer judges then evaluated each entry on creativity, persuasiveness, and overall presentation. The top standouts received cash prizes. Other incentives have included Wyoming Young Entrepreneur Pitch Challenge t-shirts and pizza parties for programs that have an exceptional participation.

The Wyoming Young Entrepreneur Initiative gives youth a way to solve problems now and in the future. The more they practice entrepreneurial thinking, the more confident and creative they become when approaching challenges of all kinds.

"Judging the WYAA youth Pitch Challenge has given me an opportunity to peer behind the curtain at the ideas of the next generation of entrepreneurs and problem-solvers in Wyoming," says David Maulik, a 2021 volunteer judge. "I am confident that if we give these students the assistance, support, and encouragement moving forward, we have a good chance to help them solve the problems our state is currently facing and be ready to tackle any more that come our way."

Women Waiting to Work

tacy Stebner wondered if her family would ever come off the Apple Valley School (AVS) waitlist. After having her second baby in August of 2020, Stacy said, "I planned to return to some sort of nonprofit, or academic work." She had quit her job as the Director of the Lander Art Center with a plan to take only a year or so off from her career. However, without stable childcare, it was impossible to return to work.

Lack of accessible childcare impacts not only women's abilities to earn an income to support their families, but also the availability of skilled labor in the community. The women with children on AVS's waitlist are valuable to the workforce, but their ability to contribute to their communities and households is on hold WYWF's Wyoming Women as Economic Drivers report found that "when women exit the labor force, the impacts to overall state and local economies are severe. It's estimated that the state of Wyoming would lose at least $45 million in GDP if every Wyoming woman stayed home from work for just one day."

Fundraising efforts for Apple Vally School work to ensure childcare is accessible.

Stacy is quick to express how much she loves being part of the Lander workforce. "I gain a huge sense of personal satisfaction from contributing to my community in meaningful ways, and to my family financially," she reflects. Many Wyoming women share Stacy's feelings, but need reliable childcare to make it all happen.

When WYWF learned that AVS aimed to address the lack of stable early childhood education capacity in the Lander community, WYWF's board was compelled to help. In the Spring of 2021, AVS secured a location to expand in multiple phases and with the help of a WYWF grant, they have completed phase 1 of their renovation and are now operating at an increased capacity.

Stacy's oldest child now attends AVS part-time while Stacy teaches two courses for Central Wyoming College and works on coordinating a large-scale mural project, the Bossert Collective, which she co-founded. In addition to Stacy, AVS expanded working hours for at least 10 other Wyoming women, increasing their earnings and investing in the Lander community skilled labor pool.

Because of your support, WYWF was able to invest in these moms' participation in the workforce, helping Wyoming realize the untapped economic resource women have to offer.

What's next for AVS?

AVS is planning to undertake phase 2 of the construction project in 2022 with the hope of adding an additional 10-15 children from the waitlist. With this additional expansion, AVS will create two new full-time positions and one part-time position after doubling their teaching team just last year. Through fundraising efforts AVS works to ensure childcare is accessible to any family, regardless of their capacity to pay. All of this is possible thanks to the generosity and support of Wyomingites.

WYOMING STATE MUSEUM: CONSERVATION EDUCATION TRUNKS

yoming has some awe-inspiring wildlife. But we seldom get up close and personal with our more impressive creatures.

If you can feel a grizzly bear's fur, you are probably not interested in how well it keeps the bear warm. If you can see its jaws move and feel its teeth, anatomical efficiency is likely not your main concern. And if you can see its claws, you are not thinking about how it uses them to fish. Most likely, you are trying to beat a hasty retreat.

But all over the state, middle schoolers are doing the opposite. They are getting hands-on experiences of Wyoming's rarest wildlife. Conservation Education Trunks are a Wyoming Youth for Natural Resources grantee. Because of your generosity, trunks full of wildlife biofacts are being sent from the Wyoming State Museum in Cheyenne to schools all over Wyoming.

Each trunk contains the pelts and skulls from many different species, including endangered animals. Most of these animals are indigenous to Wyoming. Many have legal protections on them. So acquiring these biofacts from legitimate partner organizations was a vast and complex task.

Leading this effort is Curator of Education Jeremy Thornburgh. Jeremy and the museum team have assembled tools and created curricula to inspire young people to engage in conservation. Jeremy's focus is on "encouraging the kids to research what they can do, and how they can make a positive impact on the animals."

Annually, the Wyoming State Museum reaches

students via virtual field trips

person field trips

Education Trunk Programs:

Collaborating on this project was museum Education Coordinator Laura Dale. Laura researched the animals so that she could put together learning guides on each species. What makes these guides special is that they ask students to do their own research. The young people encounter "a new and unique way to [take] conservation action." After learning with the trunks, they can "practice the things they learn in school."

This kind of active learning is very important to Jeremy and his team. He himself was a young conservationist. As he recalls, "this taught me a long time ago that one person can make a difference. You don't have to change people's minds in the moment – you just have to make them care a little bit."

After experiencing the excitement of a Wildlife Conservation trunk, Wyoming's young people may care more than just a little bit. You don't have to change people's minds in the moment — you just have to make them care a little bit.

The mission of the Wyoming Wildlife Foundation is to create an enduring natural legacy for future generations through stewardship of Wyoming's wildlife.

EXPANDING OPERATIONS SUPPORT FOR THE Y.E.S. HOUSE, INC.

N.E.S. (Mouth Emergency Services) House Foundation Endowment Fund

A House of Connections

e often refer to Wyoming as a small town with very long streets. There are only a few degrees of separation between any two people. In Gillette, even if you don't know it, you are connected to the Y.E.S. House.

The Y.E.S. House Independent and Transitional Living program helps young people ages 16-21 with life skills and housing assistance.

"Most people don't realize how close they are to someone who has, in some way, needed services at the Y.E.S. House," says Mary Melaragno, executive director of the Y.E.S. House Foundation. "In one year, they can serve about 1.000 children and their families."

A lot has happened in the last few years- a pandemic, and a decrease in funding for the Y.E.S. House and their programs. Mary knew the foundation needed extra financial stability. The best way to help people is to ensure the financial stability of this work now and into the future.

The Y.E.S. House Foundation created an endowed fund with WYCF to ensure just that. Money raised for the endowment fund at WYCF helps provide that long-term support. That endowed fund, created in 2018, made a difference during the pandemic.

"People get caught up thinking the programs are for 'bad' kids, but they're not," says Mary. "These kids are truly the future employees, employers, or elected officials we will see in our communities someday."

Everyone needs help at some point, and the Y.E.S. House provides services for these situations.

"A family may be experiencing crisis and may need somewhere for their child to stay, a parent may need extra > help and the Crisis Center is open," says Mary.

"This program helps participants with things like budgeting, for example. I've heard residents say they 'never want to be homeless again' and they'll do anything they can to be successful," says Mary.

Endowed funds like this, fueled by gifts from people like you, help ensure this work supports nonprofits like the Y.E.S house for years to come.

"At least once a month we get a message from someone who was at the Y.E.S. House in the past and they want to thank their mentor," says Mary. "Sometimes you just need that one person to change your life."

Dancing with the Gillette Stars is the Y.E.S. House Foundation's biggest fundraiser, bringing in $200,000 in 2021.

STATS & FACTS

Youth Emergency Services Foundation's purpose is to provide funding for programs, children and families, equipment, and building and expansion needs of the Youth Emergency Services, Inc. to better serve the Gillette, Wyoming community.

In 2021, they raised in commitments

$1,196,4 to put into the endowed fund at WYCF.

A Legacy of Literacy —Sue Jorgensen Library Foundation

The Sue Jorgensen Library Donor Advised Endowment Fund, held at WYCF, supports Wyoming Reads and other literacy programs within Wyoming. Every May, children gather for the Wyoming Reads celebration to receive their very own copy of a book funded (in part) through Sue's fund at WYCF. Sue tragically passed away in 1996, and her husband John wanted to do something to remember her. Sue was passionate about literacy and youth, so the Wyoming Reads program was a perfect fit.
